VOL. XXXI, No. 14

ITHACA, NEW YORK, JANUARY 3, 1929

PRICE 12 CENTS

New Law School Building is Provided

Myron C. Taylor '94, a Trustee of the University, Makes $1,500,000 Gift to Cornell—Structure to be Located at South End of Campus, Replacing Boardman Hall, Home of School Since 1892

A new home for the Cornell Law School has been made possible by a gift of $1,500,000 by Myron C. Taylor '94 of New York, a trustee of the University and chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation. The gift was announced by the Board of Trustees December 19. It was made through the Cornellian Council.

The new law school building will be known as Myron Taylor Hall. Preliminary plans have been prepared by F. Ellis Jackson '00 of Providence, R. I. The building will be erected at the south end of the campus, overlooking Cayuga Lake and the City of Ithaca.

The donor was born in Lyons January 18, 1873. He took the degree of LL.B. at Cornell. He is president and director of Myron Taylor and Company, Inc., a director of the First National Bank of New York and First Security Company, a director of the New York Central Railroad, the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé Railroad, and the Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Corporation, and a trustee and director of the Mutual Life Insurance Company of New York.

Mr. Taylor is a member of the Society of Colonial Wars, St. Nicholas Society, Sons of the Revolution, and the Society for Improving the Condition of the Poor. He also holds membership in many clubs, both in America and abroad.

His letter conveying the gift makes several statements of interest concerning the profession of law. The letter follows:

"As a member of the New York Bar for over 30 years and during that time having been in close contact with a number of industrial, commercial, banking and railroad enterprises, the growing need has been emphasized in my mind for competent and well trained lawyers to guide in the handling of the larger affairs of the country.

"It has also appeared to me that in the public affairs of the day, both at home and abroad, in peace and at war, no group of men has made a greater contribution than the members of the Bar. Under our system of government and in its important branches of law-making as well as of law administration and enforcement, the trained legal mind is best fitted for leadership; and it has long been my desire, if favored by fortune in sufficient measure as the result of the efforts of my life, to make a substantial contribution to those fields of preparation embodying legal training and research in connection with the law, as the medium through which such funds would be employed for the public good and to aid the youth in generations to come to enjoy suitable facilities for the cultivation of such knowledge.

"In my situation one would naturally turn first to Cornell University as that medium for the working out of this purpose, because it is my own alma mater, and also because it seems to me that Cornell is admirably fitted to develop a center for such training and research, particularly in view of the solid foundations and high standing of its existing School of Law.

"As the result of extended travel in many parts of the world, it is my conviction that more and more, in all matters affecting public affairs of this country, in the enactment of its laws, in law enforcement, in leadership in the great matters of public concern, in our foreign services, and particularly with respect to our diplomatic service, the ranks should be recruited very largely from the legal fraternity as that body is constituted in this country.

"It is well to stress the importance of the study of languages in the University by those who are students in the School of Law, particularly French, which is the diplomatic language of the world, and, if possible, Italian and Spanish, as being the languages which most likely in future will be found of greatest service to those of the legal profession in all international affairs and especially if engaged in political matters, either domestic or international.

"It is to be hoped that ultimately such a centre or College of Law will be developed and will embody within its courses in international law one of diplomacy, that it may permit its students to equip themselves especially for our government's foreign service; and that it might be so set up that some part of the college course might be spent under the right auspices in the city of Washington, with facilities for becoming acquainted with the governmental machinery and the official and social amenities as applied particularly to this service."

The Cornell Law School, for which Mr. Taylor's gift provides new quarters, was first opened in 1887. The present building, Boardman Hall, was built in 1892. At that time, the young law school had a small faculty and about 125 students. The appropriation for Boardman Hall was made by the Board of Trustees in 1891, and the building was first occupied in the fall of 1892. It cost $110,000. It was dedicated February 14, 1893, when the Moak library was formally presented, augmenting the original library then consisting of about 10,000 volumes.

Boardman Hall was named in honor of the school's first dean, Judge Douglas Boardman. The Moak Library was donated by Mrs. Boardman and Mrs. George R. Williams, and its presentation was made by Judge Francis M. Finch.

The gift was received by President Jacob Gould Schurman in behalf of the University.

Many distinguished men have been members of the law faculty. They include former Justice of the Supreme Court Charles E. Hughes, now a Judge of the Permanent Court of International Justice; Francis M. Burdick, for twenty-five years Dwight Professor of Law in Columbia University; Harry B. Hutchins, later president of the University of Michigan; Cuthbert W. Pound '87, judge of the New York Court of Appeals; Frank Irvine '80, former Public Service Commissioner of New York, and Ernest W. Huffcut '84 and Edwin H. Woodruff '88, both former deans.

President Livingston Farrand made the following statement at the time the gift was announced:

"Mr. Taylor's splendid gift is one of the most significant that could possibly have been made. It is well known that in the planning for Cornell's future the development of the Law School has been constantly emphasized as representing one of the greatest opportunities which lie before the University. The trustees were so convinced of the soundness of this view that they had already authorized the preparation of definite building plans as the first step toward the realization of their aim. Mr. Taylor's appreciation of the opportunity, his grasp of the broad field of service of a modern and progressive center of legal education indicated by the terms of his letter of gift, his provision for the necessary building and equipment on a generous scale make his offer one which the trustees have accepted with peculiar satisfaction and gratitude. I am sure every Cornellian will share their feeling."

ALUMNI EXTENSION SERVICE HEAD

R. Warren Sailor '07, editor of the ALUMNI NEWS, was elected president of the Intercollegiate Alumni Extension Service, Inc., at a meeting December 14. He succeeds John L. Morrill of Ohio State.

Officers reelected were Arthur C. Busch of Rutgers, vice-president; Edward N. Sullivan of Penn State, secretary; John O. Baxendale of Vermont, treasurer; Levering Tyson of Columbia and Walter R. Okeson of Lehigh, directors at large; and E. T. T. Williams of Brown, comptroller.

The service operates the Intercollegiate Alumni Hotel Plan, in which the ALUMNI NEWS participates. There are now forty-nine intercollegiate hotels located throughout the country. At each hotel for the convenience of visiting guests there is an index of resident alumni of the participating colleges, and a table on which are the various alumni magazines. The hotels thus serve as an actual if informal center of considerable alumni activity.

ATHLETICS

Quintet Breaks Even

The Cornell basketball team broke even in two recent games, defeating Alfred at Ithaca December 19 by the score of 33 to 19 and losing to Rochester at Rochester December 22, 29 to 27. The team disbanded temporarily after the Rochester game, but resumed play January 1 against Niagara at Niagara Falls, the first of four games on the annual Christmas trip.

The Red and White quintet had little difficulty defeating Alfred after the visitors gained a five-point lead early in the game. Layton's foul point was Cornell's first score, but Alfred made the count 7 to 1 before the Red and White started a scoring drive that netted thirteen points before the visitors scored again. Captain Layton was the leader in the burst of scoring. The half ended with the score 16 to 11 in favor of Cornell.

Cornell maintained a fast pace in the second half, but in the first few minutes of play Alfred cut down the Red and White lead to three points, but field goals by Lewis, who was playing his first game of the season, and Harrington started another scoring drive.

The Red and White had some difficulty penetrating the Alfred defense, and many of the scores were made on long shots. Cornell's own defense did not measure up to the standard set in the first game with Niagara.

At Rochester a fast finish that overcame a Cornell lead gave the Rochester five its two-point margin of victory over the Red and White quintet. Cornell finished the first half with the score 16 to 9 in its favor, but the second half rally of the home team proved too much for the Ithacans.

Cornell increased the lead to nine points to open the second half, but four points on a basket and two fouls shot by Kincaid, Rochester center, started the rally. The score was tied at 21, but Cornell, on successive baskets by Lewis and Layton, again assumed a four-point lead. With two minutes left to play, Rochester, on a basket by Kenyon, who played three different positions during the game, went into a one-point lead. Another basket by Kenyon ended Rochester's scoring, but Murphy's successful free throw cut the margin to two points.

Professor Smith took the degree of M.E. at Cornell and remained here two years for graduate work. He was professor of electrical engineering at the University of Arkansas, head designer and electrical engineer of the Elektron Manufacturing Company at Springfield, Mass., and professor of electrical engineering at Purdue.

In 1896, he became professor of electrical engineering and director of the department at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, positions he still holds. He has also served as designer and consulting engineer for the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, Pittsburgh, Pa., since 1905.

He served as chairman of the International Group Jury of Awards at the St. Louis Exposition in 1904. He is an associate member of the Naval Consulting Board and was consulting engineer with the special board of the U. S. Navy on anti-submarine devices.

Convention Held Here

Association of Cosmopolitan Clubs Meet on Campus—Nineteen Nationalities Represented

The Cornell Men's and Women's Cosmopolitan Clubs were hosts on December 27, 28, and 29 at the Cosmopolitan Club, Ithaca, to sixty-five delegates of the Association of Cosmopolitan Clubs for the twentieth national convention and the second biennial assembly of the association. Nineteen nationalities and forty-four American universities were represented.

The convention elected chapters at De Pauw and the University of Indiana jointly as the national executive chapter and named Indianapolis, Ind., for the next convention. The executive chapter elects the national president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer.

Cornell was renamed the alumni secretarial chapter because of the work already accomplished during the past year by Clayton E. Whipple '25 as alumni secretary. The University of Minnesota was named the archives chapter.

Approval of the creation of a permanent Advisory Council was the chief business concluded at the convention. It was suggested that at each national convention there should be named to this Council certain outstanding individuals who have rendered a world wide contribution to international friendship and that these men and women should be designated world citizens.

Among the names proposed were those of Charles Evans Hughes, a former member of the Law School Faculty, Elihu Root, David Lloyd George, and John H. Finley.

The convention banquet was held on December 27, President Farrand, Professor Nathaniel Schmidt, national president of the Association, and Harry C. Edmonds, director of International House, New York, being the principal speakers.

A welcome to the delegates was given by Minnie Kaplan '29 of New York for the women's club and William J. McEnery '29 of Kilkenny, Ireland, for the men's club. Professor Othon G. Guerlac was toastmaster.

An open meeting, to observe the thirtieth anniversary of the Corda Fratres and the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Cosmopolitan movement in America, was held on December 28. The speakers were Professor Schmidt, George de Grassi, Mrs. Florence Naysmith '08 of Brookline, Mass., Dr. Erl A. Bates, Professor Guerlac, and Professor Edgar L. Hinman '92 of the University of Nebraska, national vice-president.

The Rotary Club was host to the delegates at a special luncheon on December 28, at which the speakers were Robert E. Treman '09, president of the Club, Professor Schmidt, Matylda A. Zuronska of Syracuse University, Flora B. Zapata of the University of Kansas, and Rachael Gould of De Pauw.

The convention closed on December 29 with a tea given by Professor and Mrs. Schmidt at their home.

SPORT STUFF

In the week between Christmas and New Year's the Campus becomes more nearly stripped of students than at any other time. If you didn't drop in at Willard Straight once in a while to find two or three hundred of them bearing up joyously, you'd think there weren't any here at all.

Those who remain are mostly foreigners—students from Asia, South Africa, Utah, and the islands of the sea. In the calming atmosphere of Willard Straight they forget social animosities and religious prejudice and meet on the common American ground of Post-Office and Up-Jenkins.

But the exodus of students is more than offset by the homeward rush of Campus Tigers back for Christmas. The university in which they were born and weaned and had the mumps and fell out of the apple tree and got spanked is all theirs again for a week. They have a natural tendency to take it apart to see what makes it tick.

Students sometimes feel sorry for professors' little children who have to grow up under foot on the campus. Their sympathy is wasted. Those children have a wonderful time and generally turn out rather remarkable persons. Invariably they love Ithaca and make holiday when they return to it. And endurance! I can keep up with students but these Campus Tigers take too long steps for the middle-aged and short-waisted.

BOOKS

A New American History

History of the United States. Volume I, 1783-1865. By Asa Earl Martin, Ph. D. '15, Professor of American History in Pennsylvania State College. Boston. Ginn and Company. 1928. 21.3 cm., pp. xiv, 806. Price, $3.28.

We do not hesitate to pronounce this an excellent work in its field. Without visible effort, without strain, writing simply and directly, the author has well digested his materials and has told his story effectively. There are thirty-three chapters, twenty-six maps, a select reading list of seventeen pages, and a good index filling sixteen pages. There are very few footnotes. The completed work in two volumes will be well adapted to a college year's work.

It is in the main a political and economic history rather than a record of social progress. The author provides only one chapter on social and intellectual readjustments, which covers less than half (1820-1860) of the period represented by the entire book. This chapter, however, gets at the heart of the matter, and it must be admitted that the second half of the whole period witnessed far more striking changes in the world of manners, education, religion, and science than did the two score of years following the Revolution.

Martin gives due attention to personalities. "Although Hamilton was born in lowly circumstances and was never wealthy, he was always aristocratic in his sympathies. He seemed to have an inherent reverence for tradition." Burr, "although recognized for his ability, captivating personality, and influence," was "not trusted even by his political associates." Jefferson in 1801 "was fifty-eight years of age. He was six feet two and a half inches tall, was slender and loose-jointed, had a red, freckled face, was awkward in his attitudes, and had little in his appearance that suggested command. Perhaps his geniality was the trait that most impressed casual acquaintances." Of Buchanan: "At the time of his election to the presidency he had held public offices of one kind or another continuously for forty years, a record exceeding in length that of any other chief executive. In no one of his numerous positions, however, had he attained distinction; but his attractive personality and his ability to deal with men on a compromise basis carried him with a reasonable degree of success through all the great trials of his career until he met the question of secession in 1860. Then he faltered and fell in a sea of indecision."

The author is also concerned with popular attitudes toward the great men and measures that came successively to the front. Take for example the slavery problem, with the abolitionists clamoring for the abolition of the godless institution and the equally radical Southerners manufacturing a God-given warrant for its retention and perpetuation. One feels more certain than ever that while personality had much to do with the Civil War, soil and climate also had much to do with the people's attitude toward it.

The story of the Civil War is exceptionally well told. The author is fair to both sides, and we see no reason why the book should not find equal favor in both South and North. Likewise foreign attitudes toward the United States are squarely, though frankly, dealt with. In general the seamy side of our history receives due attention without being made unduly prominent.

COMMEMORATE DEDICATION

A memorial service on the occasion of the third anniversary of the formal dedication of Willard Straight Hall was held in the Memorial Hall of the building December 16. The speakers were President Livingston Farrand, Romeyn Berry '04, graduate manager of athletics, and Professor Olaf M. Brauner.

President Farrand said that in talking with Mrs. Leonard K. Elmhirst, widow of Willard Straight '01, for whom the building is named, "it was clear to me that she was not satisfied with the provision simply of an attractive, comfortable clubhouse, a very gratifying center for the students to come to. She wanted something to illustrate Willard Straight's mind and character, and she was eager that this gathering place for students should serve to stimulate that very probing spirit, that adventurous mind that was his.

"We do well to cherish the memory of outstanding characters in an institution like Cornell; they are not too numerous; they leave their trace behind. Willard Straight will be more and more valued at Cornell as the years go by. We have this hall about which memories of him may cluster. I can realize what a character like his can mean for the coming generation of students."

WRITES OF EARLY DAYS

Charles A. Storke '70 of Santa Barbara, Cal., one of the few surviving members of the second class to graduate from Cornell, has written interestingly of the early days of the University in a letter to the Cornell Alumni News. His letter reads in part:

"...It seems but yesterday that I first climbed the hill at Ithaca. It was September 14, 1868. I entered in advanced standing, in the junior class, and was at the opening services of the University. The words of George William Curtis, who was one to make an address at that time, still ring in my ears. Then I was a boy of twenty, and now I am past eighty, and in the sere and yellow leaf. Still I do as much work today as I did when I was but forty years of age...

"Well, I am very near the oldest graduate of Cornell. My class was of '70. Only one or two are living. The class of '69 is almost gone. Two members, possibly three, still survive.

"The first time I was on the campus the White building was in an unfinished state, and another was in progress. All the many buildings that now grace the campus have been erected since 1868. The only thing that looks natural about the campus now, is the view over Cayuga Lake. That is the same. I remember a student named Hartt, a brother of Professor C. F. Hartt, putting on the board of one of the recitation rooms a crayon sketch of Cayuga Lake as seen from the White building. It was as I then thought a work of art. Nearly all who looked on that picture are in the cemetery. God bless them..."

LAW SCHOOL INTERNATIONAL

THE GIFT of Trustee Myron C. Taylor '94, received by the University since our last issue, places the study of law on a plane that is not only fortunate indeed for the University, but merited by the present excellence and the historic brilliance of the Law School.

This school has given to the State of New York a long line of distinguished jurists, lawyers, a governor or two, and other officials, as well as a body of graduates grounded soundly in law for less showy but nevertheless essential service to the state and nation.

For a comparatively youthful school, it has already supplied its quota of distinguished lawyers whose service transcends the local boundaries, and has made them national and international figures. Foremost among these is Mr. Taylor himself, the giver of a Christmas present to Cornell that will enable the housing of the Law School in quarters that are adequate for a school with its record of service and for the distinguished gentlemen who have been and are now on its staff of instruction.

Mr. Taylor's gift assures the expanding of the scope of the Law School beyond service principally to the State and places it in the front rank of law schools which will train the legal mind for national service and world service.

FACULTY GUESTS OF CHICAGO CLUB

Dean Charles K. Burdick, and Professors Robert S. Stevens, Lyman P. Wilson, Elliot Cheatham, Horace E. Whiteside, Herbert D. Laube, and William H. The entertainment was in charge of John Dole '18, Charles D. Albright '12, Erskine Wilder '05, George Pond '10, Luther Emmert '11, and Malcolm D. Vail '12, who rendered a varied musical and humorous program. The Club, whose president is Orville G. Daily '20, sent invitations to all undergraduates resident in Chicago to attend with their fathers or younger brothers.

in 1925-6. Professor Ries has been head of the department at Cornell since 1914.

In 1893 he served as director of the New York scientific exhibits at the Chicago Exposition, and was a member of the jury of awards at the Cotton States and International Expositions, 1896, the Buffalo Exposition in 1901, and the St. Louis Exposition in 1904.

The Week on the Campus

THE big break of the fortnight was of course the Christmas present of Myron C. Taylor '94. You have no doubt been reading the whole story on our news pages. It was a fine thing for Mr. Taylor to do, and a fine thing for the University that he considered it capable of turning his purpose into actuality.

I HOPE YOU did not fail to read the text of Mr. Taylor's letter. These are weighty words, good meat for meditation. What he asks of a law school is not, evidently, competent practitioners before the courts, but leaders in diplomacy, industry, and finance. The "trained legal mind," says Mr. Taylor, has the advantage in the struggle for such leadership. Not everyone will agree; but the testimony of one who has earned so well the right to judgment has, to a legal or non-legal mind, great importance as evidence.

THE CLOSING week of school was quiet, regrettably so to the recorder of goings-on. Most of the fraternities and clubs had Christmas parties, in the course of which gifts were distributed reflecting as offensively as possible on the characters and personal habits of the members. But as none of the festivities got as far as the police blotter we can give you no authentic and detailed information.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT silenced even the lecturers. We have only to record the talk by Dr. Américo Castro of the Centro de Estudios Históricos, Madrid, on "Dios, el Mondo, y el Hombre en la Edad Media." Dr. Castro stopped off here on his way from the City of Mexico to Madrid.

PROF. CHARLES V. P. YOUNG '99 recently submitted in the Sun some words of regret about the decline of walking. And indeed the motorization of undergraduate life has resulted in a demonstrable deterioration of muscle fiber and joint tissue. The descendants of the mighty oarsmen of the past, who trained on Buffalo Hill, would fall in a faint at Stewart Avenue, although they can stand any amount of punishment sitting down. Judge Irvine once remarked that in fifty years man's lower limbs will be almost completely atrophied, possessing only enough power to push down the accelerator. Well, but anyhow, Professor Young outlined a proposal to revive the quaint old custom of foot locomotion. A friend has offered a cup, which will be awarded to the student with the maximum mileage by the spring vacation. A second competition has been inaugurated for the best slogan for the walking tourney.

IT IS THE WORTHIST of causes, and deserves the heartiest of endorsement. And yet it seems rather sad that walking, the simplest and happiest of human occupations, must be stimulated with cups, competitions, and slogans. Next thing you know there will be an organized drive for More and Better Talk, or Laughter, or Love. With, of course, the proper publicity, and cups.

OUR SPORTS DEPARTMENT does not seem to pay much attention to the Cayuga Heights Polo Club. Yet here is an organization phenomenal in our history, and certainly rare in the college world. Four undergraduates, among whom are Myron M. Fuerst '29, John D. Hertz, Jr., '30, and P. H. Deming '32, own their own ponies and have embarked on a schedule of out-of-town matches. They get no numerals, letters, shingles, or memberships in honorary societies, but they have a lot of fun playing polo. They lost their last match, with Manlius School in Syracuse on December 15, but they made a very creditable showing.

THE CORRESPONDENCE columns of the Sun have been providing excellent reading of late. A bitter undergraduate protested against the "medieval taboos" affecting the women of the college. He referred to the experience of a young lady who had permitted two gentleman friends to enter her rooms to repair the plug of a desk lamp, and who had been disciplined for such unmaidenly behavior. The young lady then wrote in an equally violent temper, but her violence was directed at the writer of the first letter; her punishment she admitted to be just; she bore the lash rejoicing. Letters and editorials rained down; there is at least a party which resents the fact that rules are enforced upon the women and not upon the men. The Sun asks rhetorically, "Is not it education in the truest sense of the word to allow women to regulate their lives as they themselves see fit?" To this the parents of the girls (most of them are minors) answer resoundingly, "No." As long as the University assumes the guardianship of the girls it must echo that vast parental negative.

CHRISTMAS in Ithaca was celebrated in the traditional manner, by prolonged ringing of the chimes at midnight and during the day, and by a Christmas Eve party in Willard Straight Hall for those undergraduates who, by necessity or election, did not go home.

THE ASSOCIATION of Cosmopolitan Clubs met here in its twentieth annual convention from December 27 to 29. Prof. Nathaniel Schmidt is national president, Dr. Erl A. Bates national historian, and Prof. Myron A. Lee '09 national treasurer. I expect you will find a fuller report of the proceedings somewhere else.

PROFESSOR FREDERICK BEDELL, M.S. '91, Ph.D. '92, of the Department of Physics, has published the details of his invention for mitigating eye fatigue. It is called an oscilloscope, and records the slightest flicker in light, or may be used to record sound fluctuations. It registers measurements of pitch of musical tone to one part in five thousand, which is five times as accurate as the best record of a piano tuner's ear. It will be of service to the experimental psychologists and to the practical engineer.

ANOTHER INTERESTING experiment is reported. The object is to determine how the amount of protein in a cow's diet affects milk production. Thirty-six pure-bred and grade Holsteins are the subjects; three groups of twelve each receive respectively 16 per cent, 20 per cent, and 24 per cent of protein in their ration. Their progress will be carefully watched over a period of two years. Dr. Frank B. Morrison, head of the Department of Animal Husbandry, is in charge. The experiment, of great importance to the farmer, has been made possible by gifts of $7,500 each from the Dairymen's League and the G. L. F. Exchange.

THIS ONE has been going around: a certain student has made rather more than his share of societies, both scholastic and social. He has explained patiently to his father that each new election is an honor which simply cannot be declined. The other day he sent home word that he had made Tau Beta Pi, and would father please include the amount of initiation fee in the next cheque. He got the money, and with it a letter in which the father said: "Don't be too easy. I have a suspicion that these societies are playing you for a sucker."

Back to the small town Industry follows the path of power

"Where power is," says industry, "there is my home."

To-day, the boy who starts out to seek his fortune in the great city is likely to meet his job traveling the other way.

To-day, power—electric power—is pretty nearly everywhere. Every year, the long stride of the giant transmission line opens fresh territory. Manufacturers are finding new opportunities outside our congested industrial centers. The job is marching to the man. Decentralization of our industrial system is transforming America.

More and more G-E motors are used every year to turn the wheels of our changing and developing industrial system. The same company which makes the huge turbines that generate power, also makes the MAZDA lamps, fans, and household appliances with which you are familiar through daily use. On all these products, the G-E monogram constitutes the same dependable assurance of quality.

To the small town, these humming wires bring a new industrial importance; to the manufacturer, they spell efficiency, as well as relief from high taxes and cramped quarters; to the worker, decentralization means a home of his own and a higher standard of living for his family. And it is the electric generator, the electric transmission line, and the electric motor which have made decentralization possible.

Boston Massacre

... "Fire if you dare, fire and be damned!" An icy snowball thudded against Captain Preston's well-tailored ribs. Trembling with rage, he cautioned his men: "Hold your peace!" A group of shivering idlers on the Boston street rapidly became a mob.

The mob pressed closer. "Lobster-backs!" jeered one Crispus Attucks, coffee-hued blackamoor. Then cat-calls, vile and insulting epithets, followed by a volley of hard-packed snowballs, some rock-pitted.

The Redcoats made little noises with their guns. "Hold your peace!" cried Captain Preston. They did; but the mob, now one great stupid animal, got louder, and the big-lipped Negro bolder. Soon he found a smooth pine board, raised it, thwacked a soldier's rump. The Redcoat turned, point-blanked his musket in Attucks' face. Spit! Flash! Crack! Negro Attucks screeched, fell dead. Other muskets spat and flashed. The mob recoiled in panic, leaving a sprawl of bodies (five starkly stiff) in the street. Blood oozed on the dirty snow. The soldiers, now ashamed, stood quiet. Captain Preston walked down the line, struck up their guns.

But it was too late to pretend that Massachusetts had not defied its King. Drums beat, bells tolled, more Redcoats issued from the barracks.

"The Governor! The Governor!" ... Acting-Governor Hutchinson, white face set in hard lines, shouldered through the mob. "Captain Preston, what means this?" he thundered. "Consider yourself and your men under arrest, sir." To the mob: "Disperse at once, to your homes." ...

So, in part, TIME would have reported the Boston Massacre of March 5, 1770, under the reign of King George III. Nor would TIME have omitted the events aggravating the affray—the townsmen's just resentment at the presence of two British regiments in the free capital of a loyal province, their just rage at having to pay for Redcoat board and keep.

So, too, would TIME have reported the turbulent mass-meeting of the day after: how Samuel Adams, popular emissary, forced Acting-Governor Hutchinson to withdraw the troops to Castle William in the harbor. TIME would have stressed the subsequent trial of Captain Preston and his men; how Josiah Quincy and John Adams, patriots both, astute lawyers, defended the soldiers, that even-handed justice might be done.

Cultivated Americans, impatient with cheap sensationalism and windy bias, turn increasingly to publications edited in the historical spirit. These publications, fair-dealing, vigorously impartial, devote themselves to the public weal in the sense that they report what they see, serve no masters, fear no groups.
